

BSA Presentation

Let us put these great SPN achievements into context.

We have developed a new paradigm for health disparities research, involving cancer education, research and training.

When we engaged researchers to aid their own, train to own and perform research to help their own, we have uncovered the power of their commitment to their own. There is a bond of trust between the researchers and their communities. This is the secret to their success.

We have an investment in these leaders and their communities. It has yielded great dividends. We need to build on this investment to yield even greater gains.
